NAOInstitute Annual Seminar Series

Provide a short summary of the work that was completed as part of this grant. *

The first seminar in the Inaugural NAOInstitute Seminar Series was the Artificial Intelligence Seminars, which was held on the 2nd of May at the Auckland Art Gallery (and livestreamed via Facebook Live). The afternoon had a Keynote Address by Madeline Newman, head of the AI Forum, and presentations by Prof Michael Witbrock (Director of the NAOInstitute and Strong AI Lab) and A.Prof Patrice Delmas (A.Dir of the NAOInstitute, Dir of IVS Lab).

The keynote address and presentations focussed on the use of AI for good in New Zealand and internationally, by creating greater opportunities for underrepresented groups to get into computer science and AI, by creating more transdisciplinary research projects to take advantage of the fields of sociology, neuroscience and psychology with AI, and of the impacts that AI can have for business and the environment.

Describe the "who, what, where and when" of your initiative.

What are the outcomes of this project? *

The main outcome of the event was greater recognition of the NAOInstitute, and the opportunities it can offer for prospective students, interns, researchers and partners in the field of AI research. We have high hopes that through the whole of the month-long seminar series, that prospective students who have an interest in the intelligence sciences to approach us to begin their studies and research career. We have had already two students talk to us about postgraduate research options, which is a great success already.

Describe major achievements resulting from this grant.
