

Domain Name Abuse Forum programme outline

8.00am: Registrations open

9.00am: Welcome from CEO InternetNZ, Jordan Carter

9.15am: Opening address

Justice Minister Hon Andrew Little will open New Zealand's first one day forum dedicated to domain name abuse issues.

9.45: Panel discussion

Our panel discussion will reflect and address the themes of the day - content, infrastructure and registration abuse. Experts from the legal, academic, tech and security sectors will represent these three areas initiating a robust dialogue.

10.30am: Morning tea

Working sessions

The Domain Name Forum goes beyond listening to talking heads. We invite attendees to actively participate and contribute to the conversation on how we tackle abuse in the .nz domain name space.

11.00am: Working session 1

For our first session we'll divide into three groups to reflect our three focus areas - content, infrastructure and registration.

We'll be exploring the different perspectives and discuss problems and solutions, identify issues and gaps and different ways to approach these. We'll be gathering ideas for how we tackle abuse in the .nz domain name space.

12.30pm: Lunch

1.15pm: Working session 2

The afternoon workshops build on the outcomes of the morning working sessions. Divided into the same three streams, participants will identify areas of commonality and divergence in ways to solve the identified problems. Consensus principles that emerge can help guide future policy development, and areas of disagreement will be more clearly understood.

2.45pm: Afternoon tea

3.15pm: Keynote speaker: to be announced.

4.30pm: Wrap up session

A short panel will share and review where the working sessions have arrived and reflect on the discussion during the day.

5.00pm: InternetNZ stakeholder function

InternetNZ wants to invite you to join us for our end of year function after the event. This will be an opportunity for you to continue the conversation or just relax. The event is a broader InternetNZ year end stakeholder function, and so you'll meet and mingle with a wide range of people from across the Internet sector and beyond.
